

JAP-CHINESE TROOPS CLASH

Venereal Clinic to Be Conducted for Negroes Here

Examination and Diagnosis Will Be Given
Without Charge

TO BE HELD JULY 20

Work Is Supported by the State and County
Authorities

A free health clinic for negroes fostered by the Southern Liberal Organization of Forrest City, Ark., and supported by the state, county and city health departments, will be conducted at the offices of Drs. J. P.
Yerger and R. P. Lewis from 8:30 a.
m. to 5 p. m. Tuesday, July 20.

Competent examination and diagnosis will be available free. To those found suffering from any disease covered by the clinic, corrective serums are furnished free.

Much impetus has been added to this movement by leading white and negro citizens who feel that it is important to the entire community to cooperate in an effort to eradicate such dangerous diseases which threaten the health security of all alike.

H. S. Barbour, executive secretary of the organization, has been interviewing leading negro women of Hope who have pledged themselves to take advantage of every public gathering to stress the importance for everyone to co-operate by attending the clinic.

"White women of Hope can render a most salient service to this cause by an earnest request to their servants to benefit by attending this clinic for the safety of all concerned—and a similar appeal by all employers will prove beneficial to not only an increase in efficiency, but from an economic point of view also," Barbour said.

Negro ministers and church officials are requested to get behind this movement so that their racial group within a ten-mile radius of Hope may benefit from this clinic.

Barbour presented documents to The Star showing that he is a graduate of several leading northern universities and colleges of medicine. He carries numerous newspaper clippings which tell of his work and success.
He also has many letters signed by state and county officials and health authorities of several states, endorsing his work.

Skunk a Gentleman, But Farmer Leaves

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usages by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers
below:

1. If you are applying for a job it is wise to tell the employer your bright ideas for improving his business?

2. Should you tell him your reasons for needing the job?

3. In answering his questions should you reply briefly "Yes" or
"No"?

4. Should you ask a person if he is willing to recommend you for a position before you give his name
a reference?

5. Is it better simply to refuse a position because you think the salary is too small?

What would you do if—You enter the office of a firm where you are applying for a job and find yourself in a reception room where there is a secretary at a desk—

(a) Go over to the desk and say,
"May I see Mr. Brown?" I'm Martha Goodie. Mrs. White of the Smith Agency sent me here to apply for the position of clerk?"

(b) Find yourself a chair and wait until the secretary asks if she can help you?

(c) Say, "May I see Mr. Brown?"

Answers
1. No.
2. No, he is interested in your ability to do the work not in your need of a pay check.

3. It is better to say, "Yes, Mr.
Brown" or "No, I don't."

4. No, if you simply refuse the position, the employer is likely to accept your decision, whereas if you "leave the door open" you have a chance to ask for a larger salary.

lution—(a).

tration Leader Joe Robinson of Arkansas served notice on the senate Thursday that he would insist upon a strict enforcement of the rule designed to impede filibustering during debate on the new court reorganiza-

Louise Thaden May Seek New Aviation Laurels This Fall

Planning to Enter

FRIEND OF AMELIA

Mena Youth Is Killed in Crash of Planes at Pensacola

BENTONVILLE, Ark.—(P)—Louise Thaden, 1936 Bendix trophy winner, may seek new aviation laurels but insists she will not attempt a trans-ocean flight, she said here Thursday.

"I'm a sissy," she said, expressing the belief that her friend, Amelia Earhart and Navigator Frederick J.
Noonan had lost their lives on an attempted round the world flight that ended near Howland Island in the South Pacific ocean last Friday.

"I may enter the Bendix race again
this fall," the Arkansas aviatrix said,
"but somebody else can make the trans-ocean flights."

PENSACOLA, Fla.—(P)—A mile high collision between two navy airplanes brought death to the pilots as the flaming ships crashed to earth in a wooded area several miles from the naval station.

Those killed were J. A. McMann, a
U. S. naval reserve cadet of Glendale/Calif., and W. F. Mershon, Marine corps cadet of Mena, Ark.

A military board of inquiry was convened to determine the cause of the accident, witnessed by many people here.

Witnesses said one of the planes was flying in formation with eight other pursuit ships when in some manner it crashed with an observation plane.
Fire broke out immediately.

Charles Morgan of Pensacola said he saw one pilot attempt to leap with his parachute. The chute tangled with the plane, he said, and suspended the pilot so that he swung into the whirling propeller.

The other aviator was burned to death, Morgan said.

MENA, Ark.—(P)—The body of Cadet William Francis Mershon, who was killed Wednesday in a plane crash at Pensacola, Fla., will be returned to his home here for burial.

at Hatfield, 12 miles south of here, January 13, 1913. He worked his way through Oklahoma A. & M. college, graduating in 1936.

In addition to his parents, survivors include five sisters, Mrs. C. E. Mc-

Mena; two brothers John J. Mershon,

A. Mershon, Mena; and his grandpar-

Mr. Noonan Gets Mail

and the letter was posted at Bandoong, Java, June 20, during the world flight of Miss Earhart and Noonan, ended when their plane was forced down in mid-Pacific July 2.

The letter contained praise of Miss Earhart's ability. He said in part:
"Amelia is a grand person for such a trip. She is the only woman flier I would care to make such a trip with, because in addition to being a fine companion she can take hardship as well as a man, and work like one."

Palestine Carved Into 3 New States

Military Action to Follow
If Strife Is Renewed in Holy Land

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—The British Government announced its approval
Wednesday night of a royal commission report carving ancient Palestine into three new states and warned that swift military intervention would follow any renewal of racial strife in the Holy Land.

The cabinet's adoption of the drastic plan for splitting Palestine into separate sovereign, Jewish and Arab states was disclosed in a White Paper which accompanied the report of the commission.

Under a new permanent mandate Britain would govern the holy cities of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth and a corridor to the sea.

Bitter objections to the plan were expected in Palestine and Britain kept troops and a warship in readiness there to stamp out possible disorder.

Program to Go to League
The program for Palestine, which the commission described as a surgical operation, will be submitted shortly to the League of Nations which has the final word.

Britain has ruled over the strif-torn Holy Land since 1923 under mandate following Turkey's loss of it in the World War.

The Government in the White Paper warned hostile elements that "pending establishment of such a scheme, His Majesty's Government have no intention of surrendering their responsibility for peace, order and good government throughout Palestine."

It added that military intervention would follow any serious disorders in the Holy Land.
The report of the five-man commission, appointed in August, 1936, following virtual civil war in Palestine, was unanimous.

in sight the bandits fled from the bank, hurriedly jumped into a waiting coupe and sped southward out of the city.

Officers immediately gave chase.
The gunmen, in entering the bank, pulled pistols and forced five employees into the bank vault and then proceeded to sack up all cash in sight.

Those forced into the vault at points of guns obtained their freedom about five minutes later and sounded the alarm.

Officials of the bank released a statement which said that loot taken in the robbery would not exceed $1,000.

Emergency Fund to Pay for Publicity

Ruling Is Given Governor
Bailey by Attorney
General

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—Attorney General Jack Holt ruled Wednesday night Go-Carl E. Bailey might use the governor's emergency fund to pay for "the public services" of the state publicly commission, industrial commission and civil service department.

Holt's opinion, given State Comptroller
J. O. Goff, placed on the governor full responsibility for determination of whether or not the "public services" rendered by the three departments met the restrictions placed upon his emergency fund by the 1937 legislature.

Bailey's findings, the attorney general wrote, would "partake of the nature of judicial decisions not review-able by the courts and bind all other officers and departments concerned."

The 1937 legislature created the three branches of state government, but did not appropriate any funds for their operation.

to Back Up His Confession

LOS ANGELES—(P)—A parade of prosecution psychiatrists Wednesday

gleswood girls, but none reported their opinion as to his sanity.

Investigators sought further corroborative evidence to back up Dyer's
confession.

Dyer is scheduled to appear in court
Thursday morning to plead to indictments the grand jury returned against him Tuesday night. He tried to plead guilty then, but was not permitted to do so, as he had no counsel.

It was reported unofficially Wednes-

Bitter Battle Is Fought in Section Near City Peiping

Jap Drive Concentrated on Walled City of Wanpinghsien

MANY CASUALTIES

Spanish Troops Claim Victory West of Madrid

PEIPING, China—(P)—Chinese
troops, ignoring a Japanese demand that they give up their arms and surrender, bitterly fought a Japanese drive on the little walled city of Wanpinghsien Thursday. The town used machine guns and rifles.

Five hundred troops were rushed to the walls while an additional 1,200 Chinese soldiers hastily erected defenses across the Yingting river along the southern line paralleling the Peiping-Hankow railway to Chungsien, four miles to the southwest.

Fengtai, near Peiping, Chinese and Japanese troops were said to have clashed while the latter carried out secret midnight maneuvers.

Numerous casualties on both sides were reported in Japanese dispatches reaching here, and it was said that artillery, trench mortars and machine guns were used.

The scene of conflict was only 40 miles south of the Great China wall, and 12 miles from Peiping which could hear the reverberation of cannon fire.

Another battle was said to have followed the Fengtai battle, the latest clash at Lukowksia. Both sides were said to be fighting desperately.

Domestic Japanese News Agency dispatches from Peiping said Japanese reinforcements were being rushed to Lukowksia, vital railway junction to Lukowksia.

Last week Japanese-Manchukuo and Russian forces fought along the Amur river, which divides Siberia and Manchukuo. A Soviet gunboat was sunk, casualties were reported, and both Russia and Japan made diplomatic protests over the incidents. In-lands in the Amur claimed both by Japanese-sponsored Manchukuo and Russia were the focal point of dispute.

Middlewest to Have Bumper Corn Crop

Recent Favorable Weather Gives Farmers Much Encouragement

CHICAGO—(P)—Farmers held high hope Thursday for a bumper corn crop.

The hope was predicated on excellent condition of the growing corn and the expressed belief that the weather just can't go haywire again this summer.

Ideal conditions—dry, sunny weather during the last two weeks—gave corn vigorous growth and lifted prospects to the point where farmers started talking about a bumper crop.

Keeping Our Ablest Men in Public Office

WITH Premier Leon Blum's resignation, another French cabinet has gone with the wind and the field is open to the customary assortment of chuckles over the situation. Americans, accustomed to methodical, quadrennial changes in administrations, find it ludicrous that there should be a veritable procession of ministers in and out of France's executive offices.

But the temptation to gibe at the "impulsive French personality" because of a seeming instability in government is all too likely to hide a valuable lesson in politics.

IN THE first place, France's government, of the "responsive" type, is not necessarily unstable. True, the premier, unlike our own President, may be forced to resign any time his policies are not approved by the people's duly elected representatives.

But immediately after resignation, the French president, elected every seven years and possessing few real powers, calls on another leader to form a new cabinet which will be wholly in sympathy with the public will. And during that transition, the nation's basic policies remain unchanged. Deposition of a premier means only that one of his major projects has been vetoed.

Most important, however, and in direct contrast to procedure in the United States, is what becomes of the premier after he has been put on the skids.

Blum's case is a good example. He had barely been ousted before he was asked to enter the new cabinet being formed by the man chosen to succeed him as premier. This is an old French custom, designed to keep the ability and wisdom of an experienced public servant at the disposal of the people.

It is a custom, unknown, and by practice virtually forbidden, in the United States. When a political party is ousted here, it is ousted in its entirety. Offices at Washington are swept clean, ventilated, sometimes literally fumigated to remove all traces of the last occupants.

Thus, men who belong to the wrong camp rarely are held over by the incoming administration. Besides, there is an old American tradition that it is inviting disgrace or political suicide to cross party lines to accept a mandate from the opposition.

BELIEVING that a good man may be down but should never be completely out of public office, France demonstrates how a nation may make the fullest use of its proven political talent.

Here is an idea on which Europe has no monopoly. It is equally applicable any place in the world, and its quality is not blurred just because it has been worked out by foreigners. The United States, shopping fenziedly in new governmental fashions just now, might take it home and try it out on approval.

The Place For Nude Art

ANOTHER American community apparently has gone through the throes and brought forth a new dictum on the difference between art and indecency. A sculptor has been commissioned to clothe the nudes in a $100,000 statuary collection donated to a Kankakee, Ill., school.

Now $100,000 worth of art, nude or not nude, would be something for any recognized museum to crow about. But in a school building, the statues might just as well be a row of tennpins, for all the real appreciation they will get.

Thus it seems that most of the argument over fine issues of morality is considerably off the point. What rings the bell in one place may be far wide of the mark in another. The fault lies with the sentimental old grads who want to honor the old home town. By tempering their generosity with judgment, they might be able to call their shots more accurately.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Vacation Puts Premium on Neighborliness

Last of three articles on "Suggestions for Vacation."

"If only I had the children to myself," says Mrs. A. "I could get along beautifully. But what can one do with the whole neighborhood running in and out all the day? That's why I dread vacation."

"Well—just what are you going to do,

Mrs. A? Spend your summer resenting the greedy Jones children or the untidy Smiths? Or do you think you would be happier if you worked out a little plan—and faced a situation that can't very well be helped?

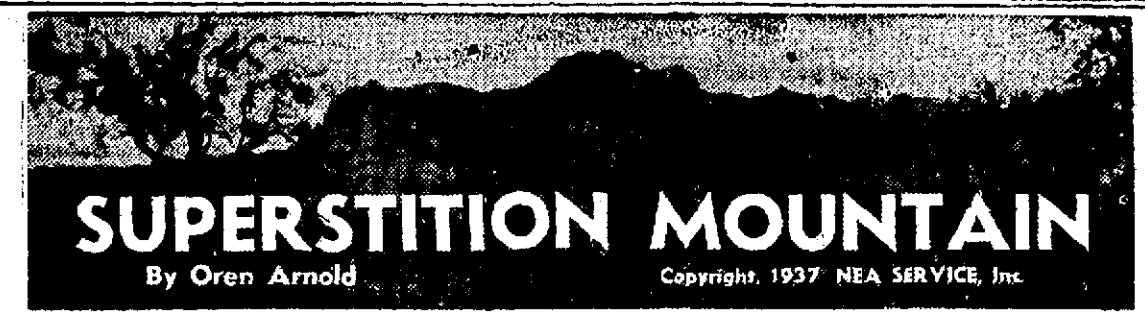

There's a Way Out

First of all, however, we'd better get one little item on the right side of the ledger. In those quiet peaceful spells when you are writing home to mother, or putting buttons on Jim's shirts, are you very sure that your Paul and Annie are not over at Mrs. B's house fooling with her radio when she is trying to telephone, or pitching a ball against the kitchen wall while she's trying to count sugar cups to her preserves?

They might be, you know, polite and considerate as they are. Because children just don't think.

That out of the way, let us go on. Mothers have no real authority over other children, either in the house or in the yard. Yet they need some. They don't know your rules and you can't be too cranky. Besides your own children will only be unpopular and unhappy if they have to keep reminding their playfellows, "Oh, you can't do this," or "My mother doesn't allow

CHAPTER XIII

THE two reporters slept late next morning and so missed some pertinent conversation incident to the search for Paul Colter.

Sheriff Watson arrived at the Lodge just at daybreak. He hadn't slept, and he wanted coffee badly enough to arouse the Lodge cook for it. Stuart Blake, deeply concerned over the matter anyway, was awakened by the sheriff's arrival and came out promptly.

"What luck?" Stuart asked anxiously, there in the kitchen. "Plenty, maybe too much," was the laconic reply.

"What—what is it? Did you find Paul Colter?"

"Set down," the sheriff commanded. "I'll sip and tell you. We found him, right enough. We wasn't expecting it just the minute, but the dog run off to one side and howled. We went over there and by George there was Paul's body. That was about sundown. Old man Colter and that Silas, they sure took it on the chin."

Stuart was staring as if entranced. The sheriff resumed. "Paul's body wasn't much bothered. We got his gun. It hadn't been shot. And he had some water and grub left, too. Damned if I can say yet what killed him, till we can get a doc to see the body. But there's one thing more—this."

THE sheriff had reached into his coat pocket and removed a handful of rocks, four or five of them the size of walnuts. "These here, Blake, are the damndest pieces of ore I've ever laid my eyes on! I've hung around mines all my life, and I've never seen rocks that showed more gold!"

Stuart took the pieces and fingered them. The sheriff had not exaggerated at all. The pieces seemed to be two-thirds virgin metal—the prettiest possible deposits of free gold. Stuart knew nothing of ore specimens, but even he could sense the extreme wealth of them. "But—but—where did you pick these up, Mr. Watson?" "Right outen his hand! I'm telling you his fingers was clutched stiff around this gold! He knowed what he had, son! He must've been headin' out to tell it. But don't let it out, yet. Say nothing. Don't want no gold rush up here. It's Colter's anyway, if anybody's."

THE sheriff was more excited than a sheriff is supposed to be, but then he hadn't had such a case before.

He swigged two cups of coffee, warmed himself by the stove, and finally regained his judicial calm. He was obviously doing some deep thinking, because he didn't speak any more except with "yes" or "no" for several minutes. Stuart went outside to see the cowboys and the guide who had ridden with the officer, and brought them in for coffee.

When they had gone back to their horses, Sheriff Watson lingered with Stuart again.

"Lemme ask you something, young man," he began. "When did you first meet this here Paul Colter?"

"Why, when I first got to town. To Phoenix, I mean. I ran into him in a clothing store. Potter's Store. Sells saddles and such, and—"

"But he took a shot at you with his gun! Wasn't no accident—now was it?" He eyed Stuart hard. "Well, no; since you ask. Matter of fact it wasn't. But it wasn't important. Misunderstanding. I got a sock on the jaw out of it, and I deserved it. The boy's sister—"

"Never mind. I know about you and the sister, too. Now you was up in the mountain the other day by yourself, and happened to get into some trouble. That right?" "No! Not that kind of trouble. I mean, my horse got killed, but he fell over a cliff. You see, my dad had been shot at, and—"

"YOUR dad?"

"Yes. Why?"

THE sheriff eyed Stuart keenly again. Stuart was obviously confused by the trend of the questioning.

"You mean yore own pappy old man Blake, was up there and got shot at?"

"Yes! He was shot at, and never saw who did it! They might have killed him!" "Himmmmm! I hadn't got that," the sheriff mused aloud. "Well, listen—did you know old man Colter, Paul's brother, had been shot at too?"

"No!" "Fact. He swore to it, and one bullet creased his hip. I saw the wound. And now you say yore papp done likewise, leas'twise got shot at. Colter said he hadn't done no talking about it, but was laying low and waiting. I'll question yore old man before I leave, but I reckon it'll be the same tale. This puts a new slant on it all, though."

"I don't get it," said Stuart flatly. "I'll tell you, son, what I had figured. Old man Colter and that Silas—they had it doped out that you slipped up and put Paul Colter out of the way because he shot at you in the store. They figure you killed him."

"ME?" Stuart almost shouted it, so astounded was he. He had forgotten that Carolee told him the same thing.

"Yep, you. I sort of put two and two together on it myself, and it looked possible. Now it don't."

THAT evoked a lot more talking, but it didn't net anything. Pretty soon Stuart remembered that Paul had been found dead. He knew Carolee would be under great stress by it.

"I've got to go at once," he told the sheriff. "That girl—Carolee Colter—I'm fond of her. Fact is, Mr. Watson, I think a great deal of her. I'll go up there and do what I can."

The sheriff grabbed his arm. "Nope you won't!" he commanded. "You stay away from them Colters. I don't know nothing about the women, but I been talking to the men. One killin' is enough in this case."

Stuart did a lot of thinking during the next hour or so.

"If somebody shot old man Colter," he told himself, "then we both have a third party to contend with. But who?"

that." The best way, then, is to bring the matter up cordially with the mothers themselves and speak right out in meeting. "Mrs. B," you might say, after admiring her pink and commenting on the baby's curls, "I want you to feel free to send Annie or Paddy home whenever you feel like it, and speak to them if they bother you in any way whatsoever. I'm going to explain to them that I've arranged it with you."

Children Will Understand And as sure as you stand there, Mrs. B, relieved at discovering an answer to her own problem, will reciprocate and suggest that you do the same.

The children soon get to know that the pact is signed by their own mothers, so they should not resent what otherwise would sound like unofficial orders.

Of course, your home is your own castle and you need not endure the impossible child, ever, whether or not you have come to terms with his parents. But the more friendly the relations, the better all around. Polish up your tact as far as you are able, and put it to work.

Try to like other children. If they like you, they'll eat out of your hand and take a bright order like, "I'm going to be very busy, now, everybody. So shoofy for this time. Jeanne, when you come back, don't forget to show me your new dollie." They'll skeedaddle when you say so, and be quiet when you ask them to—for a minute.

Neighborhood relations are important in vacation. You have to give and you have to take. Our children want to like their friends, and to like their friends' mothers. It isn't too hard, is it?

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

A Colonial Romance Is Brought to Life

Kenneth Roberts, whose "Arundel" and "Rabble in Arms" marked him as the best of all living writers of early American romances, is out with a new book, "Northwest Passage" (Doubleday, Doran; $2.75). It may not be quite up to the level of these other two novels, but it is a rich and colorful tale none the less. Marked by all of Mr. Roberts' genius for making the past come to life.

This time he is concerned with that dauntless frontier fighter, Major Rogers, whose band of riflemen performed prodigies in the last French and Indian war. The first half of the book dealing with Rogers' destruction of the Indian stronghold of St. Francis, in Quebec, and his desperate, almost incessant retreat to safety thereafter, is as fine as anything in "Arundel". The pace of the narrative slackens a bit thereafter; for Major Rogers, a genius in Indian warfare, had had luck at everything else. The dream of his life was to find the northwest passage to the Pacific—overland, via the route Lewis and Clark later discovered, and not by sea—and he devoted the rest of his career to a vain effort to make the dream come true.

How the jealousy and petty spite of pompous British officials thwarted him, how he wore himself out in the swamps of London, how he won his chance and then lost it through a frame-up engineered by his rivals, and how his flaming spirit finally guttered out in despair and frustration—this makes a tragic story and Mr. Roberts has told it well, but it lacks the quick movement and color of the first half of the book.

Nevertheless, it is all worth reading. Mr. Roberts knows the colonial period as few men know it. He can make it come to life so that he seems to be telling a contemporary story and not a costume romance. You will not want to miss "Northwest Passage."

Alligator Is Menace to These Golf Caddies

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.—(AP)—Owner John Williams of the Meadowbrook Golf course thinks he has stopped caddies from recovering balls from the fourth hole water hazard and selling them back to their rightful owners. He installed a five-foot alligator in the pond.

By Paul Harrison

The Way These Youngsters Work Usually I Music to Your Ears

HOLLYWOOD.—Village tunesmiths: The youngest song writing team in the world's erstwhile Philadelphia major leagues of Hollywood and Broadway are Burton Lane and Ralph Freed, who are 24 and 26. They don't like being called Boy Wonders, but Lane, who's a veteran at the game now, once qualified as a prodigy.

He was born in New York and was brought to Broadway's attention when he was only 14, by Harold Stern, the orchestra leader. At 15 he was under contract to Remick.

The Shuberts hired him and he contributed to three of their shows. Later, with Howard Dietz, he wrote for notable productions such as "Three's a Crowd," "The Third Little Show" and "The Vanities."

Next Irving Berlin hired him, and Lane penned "Everything I Have Is Yours" for "Dancing Lady," and numbers for "Bottoms Up" and "Kid Millions."

Ralph Freed, the lyricist of the team, had his first number published when he was 19. Been at it ever since. His "Little Dutch Mill" was the nation's No. 1 song for a month (Few ditties ever top the list for more than a month).

He and Lane are working for Paramount now and turned out several of the numbers for a dozen recent pictures. "Sweetheart Waltz" in "College Holiday" was their. Also "Smarmy" in Bing Crosby's current "Double or Nothing."

Pleased With Criticism Ten years ago a blond young man named George Antheil wrote a musical comedy called "Ballet Mechanique" for 12 pianos, four xylophones and a lot of weird sound effects and percussion instruments. It actually caused a riot in Paris and almost caused one in New York.

Antheil was pleased because so many people violently disliked his work; it was better than just leaving audiences cold and unresponsive.

He believes that any young composer is crazy who doesn't try to write some radical stuff now and then to find out what he can do. Look at 24-year-old David Raksin, a composer-arranger at Universal, who turned out a suite of musical satire on Hollywood and had part of it played by the world's erstwhile Philadelphia orchestra. Antheil also believes that movie scores—that is, chase music, romantic music and spook music—the action—are going out.

The new idea is to build and maintain the whole mood of a picture's scenery. He thinks young Werner Jaeger's score for "The General Is a Dawd" is just about perfect; built mood and background of China.

Antheil himself wrote the music for "The Plainsman," and parts of it now are being played in theaters. The only chance people have to appreciate movie scores is to see them separately, because audi shouldn't be conscious of the whole while watching a picture.

Prolific Composer The most prolific musical composer and operetta composer living today is Sigmund Romberg. He's swarthy, I has a heavy accent, and is 50 years old. He has written about 50 shows, lots of them were big Winter Garden productions and must have been made to movies, or will be.

"The Desert Song," "The Student Prince" and "Maytime" went big celluloid. "Rosalie" is another big Metro is raudy for extravagant production.

In Vienna, Romberg was educated a civil engineer, but privately he was musically inclined. So in this country, when he couldn't find a job as an engineer, he became first a musician agent and then an orchestra leader.

He was waving a baton at Bursian ob's when a composer named Harry Carroll dropped in with his new number and asked Romberg to play it.

The leader read it and said it was pretty bad; at least it wasn't so good but that he, Romberg, could write a better one.

They made a bet of $25 on it, and a few days later Romberg, who never had written anything before, brought in two tunes, "Some Smack" and "Leg o' Mutton."

As soon as Carroll heard the music he paid the bet and hustled Romberg right over to see the Shuberts.

Our Slogan

Let us face the sunrise! Let us march to the music of the morning! Let us get into our souls and voices something of the song of the opening day! Let us forget past failures and bitter experiences—forget the faults of others—forget everything but what we are doing and why we are doing it—and then—

Let us work—tremendously—without dash or fuss or fret—but fearlessly, for we are mortals upon whom destiny waits; an there is no victory without battle, and no success without contest. Therefore, coolly, quietly—keeping time with the music of the morning—but vigorously, persistently, hopefully, prayerfully—let us work—Selected.

Mae West Admits She Was Married

Movie Actress Says She Married Frank Wallace in Milwaukee

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Mae West, screen star, admitted her marriage to Frank Wallace, vaudeville actor, many years ago, in an answer filed late Wednesday to Wallace's suit seeking court compulsion that the actress recognize him as her husband.

The actress, who often had publicly denied the marriage, declared, however, Wallace had been married again without the formality of having obtained a divorce from her.

The actress admitted the couple was married in Milwaukee, but denied they ever had lived as man and wife. Miss West declared she had made no effort to have the marriage dissolved and that to the best of her knowledge Wallace had not obtained a divorce when he married Miss Ray Blakesly in New York February 6, 1916.

Wallace and the former Miss Blakesly were divorced in New Jersey May 1935, the actress set forth in her answer.

WITH THE LADIES

"Think and speak out boldly!" the commencement speaker urged the graduating class at Smith College. His words are the most courageous advice the girls could ask—the challenge to be true to their own convictions, beliefs, and codes—to be true to those morals, manners and viewpoints, whether new or old, in which they believe with all their hearts and minds, having searched diligently for truth.

When Shakespeare was having his first run of popularity, back in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, he said much the same thing in a far more personal form. "To thine own self be true," the bard from Avon sang.

Democracy in Mental Freedom To thine own self be true—that is the commencement orator's message, too. He said: "It does not seem to me that to go to college and receive a diploma has much meaning unless it signifies the capacity, and above all the will, to keep on searching for truth against all the claims and the counter-claims of all the partisans, and with it the boldness to tell the truth about any party with which you are associated."

College should not teach a boy or girl what to think. It has done its duty, fulfilled its function, when it teaches him to think. Certainly all the people in a country—all the students on a campus—can not hold the same viewpoint on any one affair. We would be robots in a paper-doll pattern if we did, colorless and thin and unimportant. Our mental vigor comes in the democracy of mental freedom.

"Think and speak out boldly!" shows how far women have progressed since that first Equal Rights convention which they held back in 1848, at Seneca Falls. They came together, then, because they sought so many things—equal rights in franchise, education, industry, professions, political office, marriage, personal freedom, in the control of property, in making contracts, in church and in leadership in all moral and public movements.

Change 100 Years Wrought It's a long way back, close to 100 years, but if the class of 1937 will take the backward view a moment it will find its great, great grandmothers, much upset and in a flutter because they didn't think it would be proper for Lucretia Mott, their leader, to preside. It would be unseemly—a woman presiding in a public place, even if it was a gathering of women to plead for women's rights! Therefore, Mr. Mott, the husband of the famous Lucretia, took the chair and shook the gavel. He is forgotten now. Most people never knew that there was a Mr. Mott—but he did the women of that early age a good turn.

Today, when we realize that the girls family of Little Rock spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Bob McCormick on Route 1, and Mr. and Mrs. Zan Ray.

Mr. and Mrs. Finis Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rowe and family, Welton Johnson and Mrs. Jane Hulsey went picnicking Monday evening.

Mrs. Evelyn Hubbard entertained the July social meeting of the Presbyterian women's auxiliary Tuesday afternoon at her home. The meeting was called to order after the devotional from John 10:10 and prayer were given.

Mrs. Corn Epps and Mrs. Rita Collins of Hot Springs visited Mrs. Kate Holt and Mrs. Lee Holt last week.

of the colleges are being commended to speak out freely, bravely, unashamed and unafraid, we realize how far we have come. We need not echo the views of any man or woman. Our reactions carry a price, a goodly one, and we should raise the banner of our causes in pride.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys
Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backache people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking away acids and poisons waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
If the 10 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, numbness, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, indigestion, nervousness, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 10 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Amercian League Players Win, 8-3

Gehrig, DiMaggio and Gomez Shine in Annual Contest

GRIFITH STADIUM, WASHINGTON. (AP)—The American League's all-stars, unloading a barrage of base hits at the expense of their foremost pitching foe, won the crest of a combined heat and hitting wave to decisive triumph Wednesday over the National League in the fifth annual charity "dream game."

Sweating in 90-degree heat with the rest of a capacity crowd of 31,291 cash customers, President Roosevelt looked on while the Americans shelled six rival pitchers for an 8 to 3 victory, with an attack featuring the long-range firing of Larrupin Lou Gehrig.

Gehrig touched off the fireworks with a third inning homer off the Great Dean, with Joe DiMaggio, the sensational Yankee outfielder, on first base. This blow gave the Americans a lead they never relinquished, and caused Dean to be charged with his first all-star defeat.

A three-run blast in the fourth frame knocked Carl Hubbell from the box as the Americans, aided by Yankee Red Rolfe's two-run triple, gained some measure of revenge for the screw ball master's domination of junior league batmen in the memorial 1934 all-star game.

The climax of the cannonading, came in the sixth at the expense of the Brooklyn fireballer, Van Mungo, as Gehrig drove in two more runs with a double against the fence in left-center.

All-told Gehrig and his Yankee mates pounded across seven of the eight American League runs and otherwise dominated the game with the same brand of power that carried them to the baseball heights against the Giants last October.

To make it all the more evident New York is the class of the junior circuit, Vernon (Lefty) Gomez was credited with victory as a result of holding the Nationals to a solitary single and no runs in the first three innings. It was Gomez's third triumph in four all-star appearances and marked the fourth victory for the Americans in five mid-summer classics.

The Nationals matched their rivals in total hit production, with 13 safeties but the outfit piloted by Manager Bill Terry of the Giants couldn't produce in the pinches.

Joe Medwick, Cardinal clouter lived up to his reputation by banging out four straight hits, but the best the Nationals could do was collect one run in each of the three innings worked by Tommy Bridges, slender right hander of the Detroit Tigers.

Mel (Chief) Harder, Cleveland right-hander, duplicated the southpaw's fine work by blanketing Terry's men in the last three frames, despite yielding five hits.

An extraordinary feature of the American League's pitching work was that neither Gomez, Bridges nor Harder issued a single base on balls, or registered a single strike out.

The youthful "goat" of last year's American League defeat Joe DiMaggio, was the defensive hero of the game and chiefly responsible for breaking up the most threatening National League attack in the sixth inning. The sophomore sensation's fast work at the outset of this frame held Joe Medwick's hot shot to a single after it looked certain to be good for two bases. Then, with one run in and men on first and second, DiMaggio came in fast to take Jim (Ripper) Collins' pinch single on the first bounce and nail the speedy Burgess Whitehead, running for Gabby Hartnett, with a beautiful throw to the plate.

This play cost the Nationals what looked like a certain run and abruptly ended a rally that had Tommy Bridges on the ropes.

GET IN THE SWIM!

By JACK POBUK
Noted Swimming Instructor
One of the best water stunts is the rolling log. It's good exercise for the spinal column and exhilarating fun. You first assume the floating log position, lying face downward in the water, arms and legs extended, with your fingers locked overhead and your toes pointed. Twisting your entire body, roll over on your side then onto your back, then roll on your other side, and back on your face, and around and around again and again as a log would do. The twist of the body should come from the shoulders and spine with your arms and legs acting as propellers.

Finds Juries Hard on Sheriff's Friends

OMAHA, Neb.—(AP)—Law enforcement officers who testify in criminal cases should never wear jewelry or lodge emblems, says Henry Beal, for 16 years Douglas county, Nebraska, attorney.

"We once lost a case here because a policeman wore a two-carrot diamond ring," says Beal.

"The jurors didn't listen to his testimony. They were wondering where he got the ring."

One almost certain way to secure a conviction, Beal adds, "is to let it get around that the defendant is a friend of the sheriff—then the jury is certain to vote guilty."

Several Are Injured in Fight Over Pastor

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Authorities investigated a church fight at London, eight miles west of here, in which a child was injured and several adults bruised.

Deputy Sheriff Burl Harris questioned seven persons and said charges of assault and battery and disturbing the peace might be filed.

The child, five-year-old daughter of Pete Martin, received a cut forehead when struck by a flying bottle.

Deputy Prosecutor Bob Ragdale said two factions at the Assembly of God church in London wrangled over the right of the Rev. Nathan Nelson to serve as pastor. When Nelson started to preach the two factions engaged in what Harris described as a "knock-down, drag-out" battle.

Arkadelphia Attorney Is Awarded $1,000 Fee

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—R. W. Huie, Arkadelphia attorney, won a $1,000 fee from the state claims commission Wednesday for successfully defending Henderson State Teachers college in a tax suit last year.

Members of the commission said a decision of Clark chancery court that the litigation was an action against the state and was prohibited by the constitution saved the state approximately $800.

Several minor claims were approved at the meeting.

There's Smoke When He Draws, Fine Suspended

TUSCON, Ariz.—(AP)—A 74-year-old prospector, Jim Abrams, accused of drawing a gun on a woman during an argument, told the court:

"There's smoke whenever I draw a gun."

"No, sir, I did not," he replied to the woman's accusation. "If I had pulled a gun, she wouldn't be here now."

Justice of the Peace believed his story and suspended a fine of $50 for ninety days on good behavior.

Hips Unpopular in Movie Studio

Stars Turn to Retouching
When Hips Escape
Diets

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The sad face on the cutting room floor has an unsung, joyful cousin—the hip on the retouchers' brush.

Hips are unpopular in pictures. Particularly if not socially, they rate along with dental cavities, double chin and crooked teeth as things one may have but not in public. A sizeable army of studio workers suffers with "retoucher's cramp"—a stiffness of the fingers caused by overwork in brushing out excess hippage from the negatives of still pictures.

When diet, massage, badminton, tennis and rowing machine have done their best, the retoucher is the court of final appeal. There is, despite the current vogue of sea pictures, no glamour in a broad beam.

Young actresses know this, and hips are the bane of their several existences. Even when they're playing themselves, they think of hips. Hips, unlike screen characterizations, cannot be changed at will.

Prosperity Brings Hips
On this matter no authority better than Louis Hippe could be consulted. Hippe is the Warner's athletic conditioner.

"Hips," he said, "always come with prosperity. Good food and automobiles are largely responsible. Too much sitting and lolling about on comfortable cushions, plus rich diet, does the trick. Automobiles are broadening in more than one sense."

Yvonne Avonde, one of the town's most facile retouchers, fears that film actresses have lost their perspective in the matter of thin hips. Yvonne thinks it's absurd for every figure to have the same hips, regardless of shoulders, legs and busts.

Nothing Like a Brush!
"I suppose," she says, "I've cut off a thirty-second of an inch from every hip I've retouched in the past several years. Exercise and diet could never reduce hips as one stroke of the brush will. One actress said frankly that she wouldn't bother to reduce when I could take off extra poundage so easily."

But Yvonne—and her co-workers of the brush—keep on retouching right merrily. Their brushes sweep the truth away, and work as well on mashed potatoes and candy as on lettuce and pineapple juice.

Accident Victims Show Improvement

Brumer-Ivory Company's Plant at Heber Springs to Be Rebuilt

HEBER SPRINGS—Five of the six injured in a boiler explosion which wrecked two manufacturing plants and caused damage estimated at more than $35,000, showed improvement and will be removed to their homes Thursday.

The sixth victim, James Reeves, 35, a fireman, suffered a severely scalded foot besides cuts and bruises, and will remain in the hospital several days.

The others injured were:

Willie Baker, 45, owner of the W. B. Baker Lumber Co. mill, scene of the explosion, who suffered cuts and bruises.

W. C. Johnson, 48, Fayetteville insurance man, crushed left shoulder and broken arm.

Walter Fry, 42, laborer, cuts and bruises.

Wilson White, cuts and bruises.

Eugene Baker, manager of the mill and brother of the owner, cut on neck.

Fireman's Clothing Stripped

Reeves, who was standing near the 35-horsepower boiler when it exploded lost practically all the clothing he was wearing. It was torn into fragments. Even his shoes and socks were torn off his feet.

Approximately 30 holes were torn in the roof of a nearby warehouse by particles of metal and bricks thrown upon it by the explosion. A brick was hurled against the rear of a Missouri & Arkansas railroad switch engine, several hundred yards away, and caused considerable damage.

Plants to Be Rebuilt

Both the mills destroyed by fire following the explosion, the Baker planing mill and the Brumer-Ivory Company's handle factory, will be rebuilt. The handle factory was about 150 yards from the planing mill.

The explosion shook practically every business house in Heber Springs. The mill was located about a quarter mile south of the business district. The shell of the boiler, flattened, was hurled about 300 yards.

Municipal League to Meet July 15-16

W. S. Atkins to Appear on Program at Little Rock

A program of timely interest and appeal to all city officials has been developed for the third annual convention of the Arkansas Municipal League to be held at Little Rock on July 15 and 16 according to William D. Henson, director.

Testing of motor vehicles required by Act 300 of 1937 has been delegated by the State Police Commission to first and second class cities desiring to undertake the work. Every phase of this undertaking will be explained and demonstrated at this meeting.

The city of Little Rock will have a station completely installed by that date and open for inspection for the visiting officials. Costs of installation, personnel requirements and details of operation will be discussed by Arthur Bolin who has been designated by the Little Rock council to supervise the work there.

Mr. Bolin has spent a week in the Memphis testing station familiarizing himself with the improved methods of operation.

Sgt. John Hendricks of the State Police will discuss desirable regulations for the enforcement of the law and co-operation between the State Police and local authorities.

W. S. Atkins, city attorney of Hope and member of the State Police commission, will be prepared to answer queries on the legality of the cities' participation in the work and on the relation of the State Police commission to municipal authorities.

Representatives of firms manufacturing this equipment will be prepared to demonstrate various types of equipment available during this meeting.

City Clerk H. C. Graham of Little Rock has asked that all city clerks and recorders in the state, whether their city is a member of the league or not, be present at the meeting to assist in the formation of a clerks and recorders division.

Housing Bill to Be Supported by FDR

Measure Provides Low Interest Rates on Housing Projects

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Wagner (Dem., N. Y.) said President Roosevelt would use his influence to get the Wagner low cost housing bill before the senate.

"He is going to help me get the bill out of committee," Wagner said after a White House conference. "He will communicate with members of the committee." The measure is in the hands of the Senate Labor Committee.

Wagner insisted housing was the only subject he discussed with the president. He laughed when asked if the question of his running for mayor of New York city came up.

Provisions of Bill

Wagner's housing bill would authorize $1,000,000,000 of low interest loans and $50,000,000 of subsidies for low cost housing projects during a four-year period.

The loans and subsidies would be available to local housing authorities. Interest rates on the loans would be not less than the cost of the money to the government.

The amount of subsidy allowed individual projects would be the sum deemed necessary to make the projects available for families of low income.

Treasury officials have said privately that the legislation would have to be curtailed drastically to avoid upsetting efforts to balance the federal budget.

"DICTATOR" CRY RINGS IN TINY LAND

An almost complete ring of dictatorship surrounding little Liechtenstein, in the Swiss Alps, has led to serious fears of a similar rule in that unique country. Only 85 square miles in area, and with a population of 12,000, Liechtenstein traces its history back to 1699 when two fiefs of the Holy Roman empire came into possession of the house of Liechtenstein. In 1719 the country became a principality. Its ruler today is Prince Francis I, but actually at the head of the government is its administrator, Dr. Joseph Hoop.

Cries of "dictatorship" have arisen from the opponents of Dr. Hoop, who built up a secret police system. He tried to appease his critics with more liberal schooling facilities, public works programs, reduced income taxes and sickness and accident insurance. But a Nazi "Fatherland Union" is still demanding his resignation.

Francis I still is nominal ruler, and his coat of arms, as shown on some of Liechtenstein's stamps, is still highly respected.

With the Hempstead Home Agent

By MELVA BULLINGTON

"Counting the calories" is necessary for safe reducing, says Miss Melva Bullington, home demonstration agent. No person should start out on a weight reducing scheme unless under the direct observation of a physician or a trained nutritionist, she adds.

The maintenance needs of the body must be met if health is to be maintained. Adequate protein to repair muscle tissue, enough calcium and phosphorus to protect and regulate the body processes, iron and copper to prevent nutritional anemia, sufficient vitamins to maintain health, and adequate bulk can be obtained in a diet with calories reduced to a minimum, according to Miss Gertrude E. Conant, extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

The best form of protein is found in lean meat. Miss Conant gives the rule of one gram of protein for each pound of ideal weight. For instance, a woman 30 to 35 years old, 53 inches in height, should weigh 128 pounds, and would need 128 grams of protein. Fourteen ounces lean meat, 14 ounces milk, two eggs, and one and a half ounce cottage cheese will give her this amount. An ounce of butter, two slices of bread, three if whole wheat is used, two servings of raw vegetables, two servings of cooked vegetables, and fruit three times a day, may be added to provide an adequate diet that is low in caloric content.

Miss Conant suggests the following menu for one day: For breakfast, a half grape fruit, a half cantaloupe, berries in season without cream, peaches, or pears to supply the fruit, two eggs, one slice buttered toast, and coffee without cream.

Eight ounces of lean beef, mutton, lamb, or chicken may be served for dinner, together with one cooked vegetable, such as carrots, turnips, cabbage, greens, or string beans; a raw vegetable salad with mineral oil dressing; a slice of bread or one baked potato; one and a half teaspoons butter; one glass of milk, and fruit for dessert.

Six ounces of lean meat, one and a half ounces of cottage cheese, one raw and one cooked vegetable, a slice of bread and butter, a glass of milk, and an orange or apple may be served for the evening meal.

This diet cuts down on the amount of starch, sugar, and fat, so that the fat of the body will be burned as fuel to meet energy requirements, Miss Conant points out.

So They Say

Shirley's future on the screen has been prophesied by practically every one, but in the long run the decision will rest with the little girl herself—Mrs. Gertrude Temple.

If the current emergency programs of the government once get themselves established, we shall be in for a long, hard winter of authoritarian rule—Dr. James Rowland Angell, president of Yale University.

Great Britain and France, by their superior strategic positions in the Mediteranean, could defeat Italy and Germany if the Spanish situation led to a European conflict.—Dr. David Popper, United States Foreign Policy Association.

Our problem during the next two years in this country is primarily spiritual, not economic.—Roger Babson noted financier.

By confining its eyes to the limited horizon of security, a nation may not only wither its own soul, but may defeat the economic and spiritual security it seeks.—Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton.

The elaborate training facilities and drill tower of the Little Rock Department will be utilized. This work is undertaken by the League with a view toward an eventual reduction in fire insurance rates in all cities in the state. Such a reduction has already been accomplished in other states through training programs conducted by departments of Vocational Education in conjunction with Municipal Leagues.
